

employees must take reasonable care of their own health and safety and that of others who may be affected by their acts or omissions. They must also co-operate with their employer so far as is necessary to enable the employer to comply with his duties

Members of management, who are also employees, are vulnerable to prosecution if they fail to carry out their health and safety responsibilities it is an offence for anyone to intentionally or recklessly interfere with or misuse anything provided in the interests of health, safety or welfare.

a) safe plant and safe systems of work

b) safe, storage, maintenance and transport of (work) articles and substances

c) necessary information, instruction, training and supervision

d) a safe place of work, with safe access and egress

e) a safe working environment with adequate welfare facilities

In the circumstances where there are two employers involved, i.e., the occupier of the premises and the outside contractor Each of them owes individual duties to his own employees and, of course, to the employees of the other as third persons

